Instruction for External Reviewer(s)

In accordance with the 2015-20 Quality Assurance Program Funding guidelines of the Tennessee Higher Education Commission (THEC), each non-accreditable baccalaureate program undergoes either an academic audit or external peer review according to a pre-approved review cycle.

The criteria used to evaluate a program appear in the following Program Review Rubric. The Program Review Rubric lists 30 criteria grouped into six categories. THEC will use these criteria to assess standards and distribute points in to baccalaureate programs. The four criteria noted with an asterisk are excluded from the point calculation but will be used by the institution in their overall assessment.

For each criterion within a standard, the responsible program has provided evidence in the form of a Self Study. Supporting documents will be available for review as specified in the Self Study. As the external reviewer, you should evaluate this evidence and any other evidence observed during the site visit to determine whether each criterion within a standard has been met. A checkmark should be placed in the appropriate box to indicate whether the program currently exhibits poor, fair, good or excellent in meeting the criterion. If a particular criterion is inappropriate or not applicable to the program under review, the item should be marked NA.

This evaluation becomes a part of the record of the academic program review. The rubric will be shared with the department, college and central administration, as well as the Tennessee Higher Education Commission. When combined with the written report, prepared by the entire program review committee, the Program Review Rubric will facilitate development of a program action plan to ensure continuous quality improvement.

Your judgment of the criteria will be used in allocating state funds for the university's budget.

PART 7 – Summary Recommendations

Overall, what are your impressions of the program?

- What are the major strengths of the program?
 1. Good connections with students
 2. Research profile
 3. Flexibility in the programs, student choice (also seems to hold within individual courses)
 4. Diversity, in areas of study in philosophy and religious studies, and in progress in hiring
 5. Interesting high-impact activities in classes, research involvement by students in presenting
 6. For what I've heard of the planned strategic plan, the department is already contributing in those areas, so I'd expect more of the same. I'd expect even more if they got whatever support they ask for.

(Example: Hire in biblical studies, or in some disjunction of biblical studies and some other area in religious studies. Would support RELG program, make for parity in the department, do a replacement hire from a vacancy long ago?)

(Example: Give the endowed chair in religious studies back to religious studies, instead of having it in PSYC. When it's time to renew/turn over?)

(Example: Summer funding bonuses, could go to support innovating teaching; more support for teaching grants through the Walker Center.)
- What are the major weaknesses of the program? (hard to identify "major" ones!)
 1. Having merged departments is far from ideal (different disciplinary expertise, don't feel connected, chair from outside—tension between hands-off facilitating and not offering enough direction, different office locations, administrative assistant) (but they've worked with it and seem to understand the advantage of it, re: #'s of majors)
 2. The assessment question: Flexibility in completing the program can make it hard to see from outside whether the program meets its program goals (even if in the context of individual courses, there's a lot of demonstrated success, 'demonstrated' in the assessment sense)
 3. Having no culminating experience for students has the same drawback as #2, and even if it's not a thesis project per se, students ought to benefit from it if its designed well. Could there be a flexible option for such an experience? (note the practical/logistical/administrative challenges)
 4. Helping students navigate the transition from college student to job applicant (with a philosophy/religious studies degree) seems needed. (The culminating experience in #3 might help with this, just as a suggestion.) The Career Services Center might do better in making connections with programs
 5. Internships might be pushed/encouraged.
 6. Connections with alumni might be explored, both to the graduates' liking and to the department's advantage in gaining useful information.

7. Department-level commitments on diversity/equity/inclusion should be easy to state, and it should be easy for them to participate in whatever larger initiatives develop from the College and University.

What goals would you suggest the program set for the next five years? Please list goals in order of priority (i.e., the most important goal first, followed by the second most important goal, etc.)

How can the program work to achieve these goals over the next five years?

- Considering current budget constraints, what are the most realistic strategies the program can use to achieve the highest priority goals?
- What goals would require additional resources? What level of resources would these goals require? How might the program secure these resources?
